Man is charged with capital rape

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

A Bay St. Louis man is currently in the Hancock County Justice Facility charged with capital rape of a 10-year-old girl.

Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Glen Strong said that Floyd Franklin Ramsey Jr., 37, 9072 Orange St., Bay St. Louis, is being held under $100,000 bond.

Ramsey was arrested on Wednesday, Nov. 23 at the Hancock County Justice Facility at approximately 11 a.m. and his initial appearance was held later that day before Judge Joe Dobson.

According to the Hancock County Justice Court, a preliminary hearing date has been set for Dec. 13 with Judge Lee Klein presiding.

Capital rape can receive the death penalty, Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson said.

Capital rape is the charge when the child is under 12 years old, Peterson added.

Severe damages

Several tombstones, vases and fencing in the Bayou LaCroix Cemetery were severely damaged by recent vandalism. The Buffer Zone cemetery was a donation to the Catholic Diocese by the late John Zengarling many years ago. A $5,000 reward is being offered by family members of some of the buried in the Bayou LaCroix Cemetery for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons involved in the vandalism. Hancock County Criminal Investigators Nathan Hoda and George Burleson are in charge of the case. Sheriff Ronald Peterson reports all information will be kept confidential, the telephone number is 467-5101. (Echo staff photos by Ellis C. Cuevas)

Cemetery vandalism, barn fire under investigation

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS

Hancock County Criminal Investigators Nathan Hoda and George Burleson are conducting an investigation into vandalism at the Bayou LaCroix Cemetery. Damages are estimated at $30,000.

Vandals toppled headstones destroying several which are not replacable. Three in one plot are valued from $5,000 to $10,000 each. Flower pots and grave site fencing were also damaged and destroyed.

Several of the stones were not broken and have been replaced.

The culprits also piled dried and plastic flowers in front of of a tomb and set it on fire, defacing it.

A barn in the Bayou LaCroix area, destroyed by fire about the same time of the vandalism, is being investigated by the State Fire Marshal and Hancock County Fire Marshal Richard Pate.

Family members of those buried in the cemetery and the owner of the destroyed barn are offering a $5,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the persons involved with the vandalism and arson.

The State Fire Marshal investigated the barn fire and reports its origin was arson. On Wednesday, Pate said law officals feel the barn fire and cemetery vandalism were related.

Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson said, "All information will be kept confidential. Anyone with information is asked to call the sheriff's office at 467-5101."

Wayward youth apprehended

BY ELLIS C. CUEVAS

A Hancock County juvenile was apprehended Wednesday after failing to appear for transportation to Oakley Training School, Hancock County Youth Court Judge Ann Williamson said.

"Due to the lack a detention facility in Hancock County, whenever a juvenile is sentenced to a training school, we have to send them home under arrest for several days until processing and transportation arrangements can be made," Judge Williamson said.

The judge continued, "We have used this system in many cases and this was the first time for a 'no-show' on the determined date. Waveland Police made apprehension of the juvenile."

It is hoped a detention center will be located in Hancock County in the near future to avoid such problems as law officers and the Youth Court now have, Judge Williamson said.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

Whence will ministers come?

November 20 is not your prime time weatherwise along the Mississippi Gulf Coast. Nonetheless, from a shaky roll of the scheduling dice a half year ago, the Divine Word Missionaries bathed in the glow of 80-degree, dry, pleasant, sunlit skies.

More than a thousand relatives and friends came from New York, California, Chicago, Houston, Atlanta and sundry places to congratulate the Divine Word Missionaries and rejoice with them as they celebrated their centenary of work in the U.S.

In a big tent covering the foundation of the onetime gym of St. Augustine Seminary in Bay St. Louis, the jubilee Mass was kicked off to a joyous start by the pulsating 100-plus voice mass choir of the archdiocese of New Orleans.

Riding the crest of that choir and of the Judie Leger dance troupe, Bishop Terry Steib, a Divine Word Missionary and ordinary of the diocese of Memphis, walked through the chronology of Divine Word Missionaries in the U.S.

Off the founding of their missionary congregation in 1875 in Steyl, Holland, the German brothers and fathers expanded their effort to the U.S. Chicago area in 1895. Father Aloysius Heick went to serve blacks in Merigold, Miss. in 1905.

No bishop or anyone else in the whole country wanted to deal with the core of the black apostolate: a black clergy. In the teeth of this and local racist opposition, Father Matthew Christmann started a seminary in Greenville, Miss.

Conditions and pressures on the struggling seminary from its founding in 1920 to 1922 persuaded the missionaries to move it to Bay St. Louis, where a students building dedicated to St. Augustine was completed within a year.

Anthony Bourges, Maurice Rousseve, Vincent Smith and Francis Wade were the first four black Divine Word Missionaries to be ordained from St. Augustine Seminary, to be followed by scores of priests over the next 50 years.

Until a generation and a half ago, over 40 percent of the U.S. black clergy had done either all or part of their studies with the Divine Word Missionaries at St. Augustine.

Brother Vincent Webb took his first vows in 1937, marching into history by becoming the first African-American religious brother. Unfortunately, the numbers behind him

Bay depot plans get initial approval

BY MARY G. SELLEY

Preliminary plans for restoring the old depot were approved Monday by Bay St. Louis City Council.

Council endorsed plans showing the second floor devoted primarily to the L.W. Anderson Genealogical Library, and the first floor used as a reception/exhibition area with kitchen facilities.

Architect Kevin Fitzpatrick said he'd decided not to carve retail shop spaces into the structure, although kiosks will be available for small business activity in and around the building.

"Consider' it as an engine to try to drive this whole thing," Fitzpatrick said of hopes that the restoration will stimulate major rejuvenation of the depot area.

Fitzpatrick said the city could use the first floor for public meetings, and at times rent the space to private receptions and parties to generate income for maintenance of the structure.

The city recently acquired the depot from CSX, and federal officials have awarded some $600,000 for the restoration project. To qualify for the funds, the city has to follow guidance from state historic preservation officials, as well as the Department of Transportation.

The depot was built in 1928 to accommodate passenger rail service.

Restoration plans include retaining the building's old ticket office, although it's not clear whether it will be used as such in the future. Consultant Mike Cuevas said at this point Amtrak doesn't plan to offer ticketing services at the building.

Officials are hopeful, however, the structure will be a major asset to tourism.

In addition to the passenger train which stops in Bay St. Louis on a Los Angeles-Jacksonville line, officials are expecting Amtrak to include Bay St. Louis as a stop on a new Mobile-New Orleans commuter service this spring.

Cuevas said the city could negotiate with Amtrak or a private travel firm for ticket services at the depot in the future.

Meanwhile, Fitzpatrick is under the gun to finalize drawings for the restoration of the building itself. He has until Jan. 6 to complete the design, if the city is to retain its restoration funding.

In his briefing Monday, Fitzpatrick said the building would be equipped with four restrooms, an elevator and kitchen facilities. Otherwise, the restoration project will retain the essential features of the relatively simple interior, he said.

The exterior, which also will be restored, is noted as one of the more significant features of the Spanish Mission-style structure.

While the first floor of the depot has concrete flooring, the second story has what he and Cuevas described as beautiful hardwood floors that will be refinished.

Cuevas said inspection of the second story turned up a collection of old medical records that will need to be removed, including receipt books, training equipment and manuals. Cuevas said she found nothing in the materials that appeared to be of historical significance.

Besides restoring the depot, city officials hope to obtain grants to build walkways to the park at City Hall on Second Street, accented by lighting, furniture and signs.

Cuevas said officials had indicated there will be grant money available for such additional work later. "The main object is to finish the building first," said Cuevas.

Police make drug arrests

BY SHARON K. SAUCIER

The Hancock County Narcotics Task Force has made five arrests which is believed will have a heavy impact on the amount of drugs coming into the county from Texas.

Through an investigation by Bay St. Louis Police Investigator Terry Eley, assigned to the Hancock County Narcotics Task Force, which lasted more than a year, three area residents and two residents of Houston, Texas were arrested Tuesday and Wednesday.

Those arrested were:

Michael Henry, 28, 9041 Alaphaia Way, Picayune, charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Selvin McDowell, 34, 9060 Alaphaia Way, Picayune, charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Lennie Schultz, 40, 5487 Lower Bay Rd., Bay St. Louis, charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

Johnny Greene, 9109 Foderen St., Houston, Texas, charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and possession with intent to distribute.

Brian Allen, 26, 5738 Westover St., Houston, Texas, charged with conspiracy to deliver cocaine and possession with intent to deliver cocaine.

Assisting the task force with these arrests were the Mississippi Bureau of Narcotics, the Drug Enforcement Administration, Hancock County Sheriff's Department, Bay St. Louis Police Department and Waveland Police Department.

The group effort led to the seizure of a one ounce "cookie" of what is believed to be crack cocaine and another seven ounce seizure of what is believed to be crack cocaine.

The estimated street value of the alleged drugs is in excess of $20,000, officers said.

Henry is awaiting to be sentenced in Federal Court on unrelated drug charges and is also on parole in Pearl River County.

These arrests took place throughout Hancock County and more arrests are expected in this case.

Christmas

Saturday!

Hancock County's Red Ribbon Christmas parade will roll at 11 a.m. in Bay St. Louis to kick off the holiday season and bring on a round of merriment that will last until after the New Year.

"Response has been pretty good" said Cindy Vernon of participation. She is executive director of the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce, which co-sponsors the event along with the county.

She said the parade has been "a tradition for many years."

It has grown steadily in size and this year will boast around 50 units. Already registered are several marching bands, drill teams, cheerleader groups and scout troops. Gaily decorated floats, cars and trucks of all types will round out the parade.

Vernon was especially excited about the participation of the Shriners from Platta Temple who are joining with the Greater Mt. Zion AME Church of Pearlington to add even more color and vitality to the event. The Shriners are known for their comic antics and thrilling capers as they ride by on their motorcycles and dune buggies. Others march jauntily to the music of clanging cymbals and booming drums.

That jolly old elf, Santa Claus, will bring up the rear to add to the anticipation of young and old alike. He will be riding on "Big Red," a bright shiny fire engine. Vernon said that Mrs. Claus and the elves volunteer to stay behind at the North Pole to finish up the toys, so Santa can be part of the parade in Bay St. Louis.

Prior to the parade, representatives of the Bay St. Louis Fire Department will be collecting toys for the Hancock County Toy and Doll Fund. They will be at the courthouse from 10:30 until noon to accept donations.

The parade will go down Beach Boulevard to Main St., turn right on Main past the courthouse to St. Francis St. where it will disband.

Vernon said the registration table will be located at the corner of Beach Blvd. and Hwy. 90 beginning at 9 a.m. on Saturday. Lineup for the parade will begin at 10 a.m. All units must register before lining up for the parade.

"Make plans now to join in the fun on Saturday and be a part of Hancock County's Red Ribbon Christmas," Vernon said.

"We already have over 500 names and expect that number to more than double by the time the toys will be ready, a few days before Christmas."

"Many of the toys are picked up at the Bay St. Louis Fire Station, Old Spanish Trail, Bay St. Louis, while a few are delivered by Hancock County Volunteer Firefighters and Hancock County Sheriff's Deputies," Lizana said.

Funding for the toys comes through the United Way of South Mississippi, business, organizations, industry and individual donations.

"There are regular individuals, businesses and organizations who make contributions to the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund, and I am sure we will really need their help this year," Lizana said.

The program began several years ago in Bay St. Louis and is now throughout the county.

Lizana tries his best to coordinate and match each child's needs according to age.

Several of the local merchants collect toys for the Doll and Toy Fund.

Area merchants also give special prices to Lizana as he "shops" for the deserving boys and girls.

"Without the assistance of the many friends of the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund, along with the United Way, RSVP, Gulf Coast Community Action, the magnitude of this program would not be possible," Lizana said.

Anyone interested in further information can reach Lizana at 467-4736.

...no would stoop so low as to break tombstones

The Bayou LaCroix Cemetery looked like it was a war zone after a recent visit by vandals.

Thousands of dollars in damage had been done to tombstones, flower vases and even fencing, many of which cannot even be duplicated today. Estimates of the damages in today's dollars are somewhere in the neighborhood of $30,000.

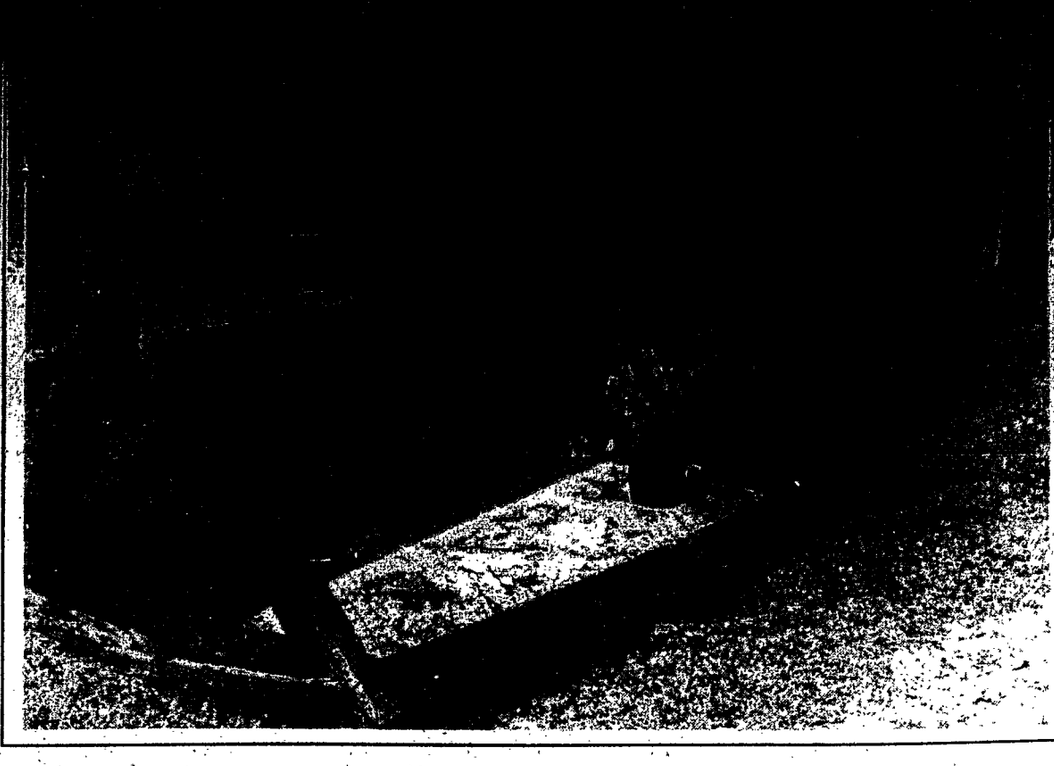
The cemetery which was donated to the Catholic Church's Diocese by John Zengarling many years ago, is located near the mouth of Bayou LaCroix. The community was moved in the early 1960's by the federal government for the location of the now John C. Stennis Space Center.

The cemetery, which is still used by many of the earlier residents of the area, is located in the Buffer Zone of the test facility.

It is hoped the culprits will be caught. Many feel tar and feathering should be the beginning of the punishment of those responsible.

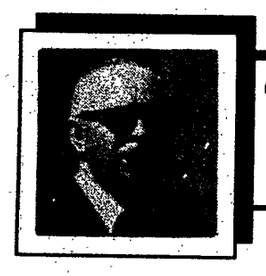
A $5,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the culprits by family members of those buried in the cemetery.

Any information will be kept in strict confidence, Hancock County Sheriff Ronnie Peterson reports. The sheriff's office telephone number is 467-5101.



Fences damaged

Vandals struck the Bayou LaCroix Cemetery in the NASA Buffer Zone destroying fences around grave sites, breaking headstones and flower vases. Reports indicate several of the headstones destroyed are not replaceable. Estimates in the damages range to $30,000. A $5,000 reward is being offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the persons involved in the vandalism. Information can be given to the Hancock County Sheriff's office at 467-5101. (Echo staff photo by Ellis C. Cuevas)



"CUEVAS' QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Hancock County's Board of Supervisors began to get into net banning back in December 1990 when they unanimously adopted a resolution requesting Wildlife & Fisheries Commission and BMR to prohibit gill netting in Hancock County waters.

I failed to recall their efforts before writing my column last week and apologize to the Hancock County Supervisors for getting on them for not taking any action. In reality, Hancock was unable to receive support from Harrison and Jackson counties way back in 1990 on net fishing in coastal waters.

Hancock County State Representative J.P. Compretta introduced a bill in the 1991 Legislature giving Hancock and Harrison counties power to regulate the use of certain nets within their respective counties.

The bill passed but was watered down a bit before passage.

I am told nets are banned within 1,500 feet of the shoreline of Hancock County from the Bay St. Louis Highway bridge to the mouth of Bayou Cadet.

Of course, the supervisors have no police powers over the water as that goes to the Department of Marine Resources.

There are many people in Hancock County who have spoken to me, who would like to see a complete ban on gill nets, purse seines, seines, and trammel nets in our waters.

I have a feeling tighter reins on net fishing will become law after the next Legislative Session.

Saturday will be the big annual Hancock County Red Ribbon Christmas Parade in Bay St. Louis.

The chamber event will have a registration table at the corners of Beach Blvd. and Highway 90 beginning at 9 a.m.

All units are being asked to use Second Street to access for line-up, so they will be facing in the proper direction.

Line-up will begin at 10 a.m. with the parade following at 11 a.m.

The parade route is Beach Boulevard to Main Street and Main to Francis Street, where the parade will disband.

All are asked to bring a toy to be donated to the Hancock County Doll and Toy Fund.

A representative from the Bay St. Louis Fire Department will be on hand at the Hancock County Courthouse from 10:30 a.m. until noon on Saturday to receive the donations.

There are a lot of events in the area in reference to the Red Ribbon Christmas event over the next three weeks prior to Christmas.

I am hoping there will be a large turnout for the annual Christmas parade and all will have a good time.

I know there are those younger folks who would like to deliver their Christmas wishes to Santa in person.

I would like to remind everyone to Shop-At-Home for Christmas.

Don't forget Waveland's Festival of Lights set for Sunday beginning at 6 p.m.

Congressman Taylor voted against GATT

Congressman Gene Taylor said Monday that if the General Agreement on Tarrifs and Trade (GATT) is passed by a rare lame-duck Congress, the American middle-class worker will take the biggest hit.

Taylor said one of his main concerns was that the agreement could reduce the average American middle class worker's real wages to an all-time low.

"Under GATT, if our middle-class workers don't restrain their wage demands companies will either collapse or pack up for lower-wage foreign nations," Taylor said.

Additional concerns revolved around the fact that GATT will create the world's largest bureaucracy while most Americans are demanding less government in their lives.

"The relative secrecy of GATT and the World Trade Organization's rule-making body should be enough to raise a red flag," said Taylor. "GATT will create the world's largest bureaucratic mess."

Under Congressional budget rules, GATT also must mandate cuts and revenue increases to offset the billions of dollars in lost revenues from tariff reductions.

"The GATT agreement will be an economic boom for dozens of Third World countries," said Taylor. "For America, however, it will create more bureaucracy, accelerate the decline of our manufacturing base, circumvent U.S. labor and environmental laws and hurt our farmers and farm workers."

Editor's note: Congressman Gene Taylor Tuesday voted against GATT, which nevertheless passed in the House by a comfortable 288-146 vote.

Dixiecrats' secret motive becomes reality in 1994

The forces set in motion by the Dixiecrats in 1948 may well have reached a watershed in the Nov. 8 elections: the long-predicted realignment of the once-solid Democratic South.

Some of us who watched the rise of the Dixiecrats in their rather historic, though vain, effort to withhold the South's presidential electorate votes from the Democrats in 1948, suspected that the secret motive of the movement brain-trusters was to deliver the South to the Republican Party.

Evidence that this became reality as a result of the Nov. 8 elections is quite formidable: 68 of the South's 131 seats in the U.S. House of Representatives will now have occupants with (R) behind their names. Fourteen of the 24 Southerners in the U.S. Senate will be Republicans.

For added measure, six of the 12 Southern governorships will now be in the hands of Republicans.

Of course, the Dixiecrats of 46 years ago, secretly boosted by corporate interests, would never concede they were building a bridge for the transition of the South's political allegiances from the Democrats to the Republicans. Their asserted purpose was to punish the Democratic Party for going soft on states' rights and forcing the party to back off the new pro-civil rights course.

The real unspoken motive behind the 1948 revolt was simply racial segregation masked as states' rights. This began the unraveling of a thread that actually has run through the next four decades as the political evolution of the South has unfolded.

Key events have happened from time to time since 1948 that can now be seen as major building blocks in the Southern political transformation.

Mississippi Governor Ross Barnett tried to renew the revolt in 1960 with his citizen's Council-backed Unpledged Elector scheme in an attempt to keep John F. Kennedy from being elected president. Mississippi and Alabama went along, but the Unpledged Electors fell flat elsewhere in the South.

Possibly the single most important event which irretrievably set the South on a course of separation from the Democratic Party came in July, 1964 when Lyndon Johnson signed the Civil Rights Act. Prophetically, he said at the time that the Democratic Party could kiss the South good-bye for a generation.

Some evidence that Johnson was right appeared in Mississippi that year when the state voted for a Republican presidential candidate, Barry Goldwater, for the first time in history. Goldwater got Mississippi's support — by an incredible 87.2 percent margin — simply because he had voted against the Civil Rights Act in the Senate. And with Mississippi went Alabama (69.5 percent), South Carolina (58.9 percent) Louisiana (56.8 percent), and Georgia, (54.1 percent) Republican. But of course LBJ scored a landslide in the rest of the country.

Former Ole Miss prof Alec Lamis, in his 1984 book, The Two-Party South, observed: "1964 closed out an era and opened the way for the development of a Southern political order of a different sort." It marked the end, he emphasized, of the Southern Democracy based on white racial unity.

Richard Nixon, fully sensing the GOP potential of building on the 1960 results to establish a new base in the South launched what he called his "Southern Strategy" in 1968. Allying himself with such Southern mastadons as Strom Thurmond, he broadly promised to ease federal pressure on school desegregation. Only the presence of third party candidate George Wallace of Alabama on the ticket that year kept Nixon from a clean sweep in the Deep South.

The defection of the South Lyndon Johnson foresaw in 1964 didn't happen immediately, of course. It took four decades to work its way through the system until the obvious fruition in the 1994 mid-term elections. More and more, however, the perception of the Republicans as the "white man's party" and the Democrats as the "party of blacks' was becoming widespread in the South.

The South's shift to Republican candidates at the presidential level began even before movement at the congressional level reached the peak of Nov. 8. The South had gone for a Southerner, Jimmy Carter, in 1976, but largely abandoned him in 1980 when Ronald Reagan first won the presidency. In 1984 and again in 1988 Republicans Reagan and George Bush won virtually all the South.

Bill Clinton of Arkansas brought back half of the Southern states to the Democratic fold in 1992. But the bad news in the South for Democrats in Nov. 1994 makes his prospects in 1996 appear grim.

Still to be answered in light of the Southern GOP swing on Nov. 8 is: how far will this reach and how deep will it go? These are interesting times indeed.

Airport remains open for Stennis based planes

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Officials at Stennis International Airport have made arrangements to keep the facility open to Stennis-based aircraft during runway reconstruction.

Airport director Bill Stovall said Wednesday that special precautionary restrictions will apply to the traffic during construction.

"We owe them that," Stovall said of continued services to some 70 local aircraft operators who are based at Stennis.

Flights will be allowed only in the daytime, and no student traffic will be permitted, he said. Special instruction classes have been held to brief the locally-based pilots on details of the restrictions, Stovall said.

But as of Monday, the airport will be closed to all other traffic when construction activity begins there. Casino-related flights won't be allowed to use the facility until it reopens, around the first of the year.

That means flights planned by Jubilee Casino and Casino Magic during the next month will be diverted to Gulfport.

Bush Construction Co. was to have begun the airport runway construction project Nov. 28, but postponed the start until Dec. 5, due to weather delays in finishing another contract, Stovall said.

While the contract calls for a Jan. 15 completion date, Bush officials have said they plan to wrap up work by Christmas, Stovall said.

The work includes resurfacing and striping the runway.

Meanwhile, Stennis officials are set to begin reviewing applications for six new full-time firefighter positions. Stovall said some 40 to 50 applications for the slots have been received so far.

A decision earlier this month to revamp the airport's fire department prompted a walk-off by 13 part-time firefighters at the airport. Officials said the change to a smaller, full-time staff was based on economics.

Some of the former part-time firefighters have applied for the new positions, Stovall said. The airport has been using out-of-county substitute firefighters, during the transition period.

remain meager.

The Divine Word Missionaries were lauded for meeting all adversities head-on and rising above them, for preaching the Word of God in season and out of season, for bearing witness to the Word when it was okay and when it was not okay.

However, there was a hollow ring to the applause, for the flagship building, the students building, was missing, having been razed a decade ago to save on high insurance. Many guests lamented this and other losses around the premises.

Defunct since 1982, St. Augustine high school seminary reflected the rest of the U.S. Catholic Church. The reality: the black U.S. Divine Word Missionaries, as most other U.S. racial and ethnic groups, are a disappearing breed.

With dozens of communities of nuns becoming extinct, and the number of U.S. priests declining by more than 1,000 a year, Pope John Paul II and his lieutenants are faced with options which seem to be three unacceptable pills:

Accept the status quo to status worse; reinstate the tens of thousands of defected clerics; allow the option to marry.

Hearing set on gill net ban

BY MARY G. SEILEY

The state Commission on Marine Resources has set a Dec. 7 public hearing on the gill net fishing controversy, as Coastal area governments step up heat to ban the fishing technique.

The 7 p.m. hearing will be held at the J.L. Scott Marine Center in Biloxi.

Last week, Bay St. Louis city officials passed an emergency ordinance banning gill net fishing off the city's shore -- but said they can't enforce it. Hancock County's Board of Supervisors have gone on record repeatedly asking the state to ban gill netting.

The Bay St. Louis action came in a City Council meeting packed with sports fishermen who presented a petition of more than 450 names of people opposed to gill net fishing.

In addition to the ordinance, City Council passed a resolution asking the Hancock County Board of Supervisors to outlaw gill net fishing in the county.

And, they passed another resolution asking the state to honor the city's ban by taking action to make the ban official.

City Attorney John Scafide said the city's ordinance amounts to an advisory request to the state level for action banning gill net fishing.

"We can't enforce it," Scafide said of the city ban. The new ordinance imposes fines for violations, and outlaws even the possession of gill net equipment in the city.

In fact, the city has had a similar ordinance on the books since 1985. But its ban on gill net fishing only covered the period between mid-May and mid-September, and the city has no authority to enforce the ordinance.

Ames Kergosien told council of an influx of out-of-state commercial fishermen using gill and other encroachment type nets in Bay St. Louis, a practice he said threatens to deplete this area's supply of mullets, red fish and speckled trout.

"This Bay is a bottleneck. When you eliminate mullet, you'll eliminate speckled trout and red fish too," Kergosien said. The rush to harvest mullet during their spawning season is particularly damaging to the survival of that species, and disrupts the food chain of other fish as well, council was told.

While fish once were plentiful off Bay St. Louis' bridges and piers, he said, gill net fishermen -- and spotter airplanes used to track schools -- have endangered area stocks.

Council president Charles Scianna said the state commission should address the "over harvest" that's occurring, but he warned it may be next season before the state takes such action.

Councilmembers James J. Rutherford and James C. Thriffiley posed the resolutions urging state action, and action by the county Board of Supervisors.

The board has repeatedly gone on record in recent years asking the state to ban gill net fishing within Hancock County.

Supervisors passed three resolutions to that effect between December 1990 and July 1991, asking the state Wildlife and Fisheries Commission to prohibit gill netting in Hancock County.

Officials in Harrison County have passed similar resolutions, as have the governments of Gulfport, Pass Christian and Long Beach.

Keep natural Christmas trees fresh, beautiful

By Bethany L. Waldrop
MSU Ag Communications

For many people, a fragrant evergreen trimmed with ornaments and lights is a favorite part of the holiday season.

In recent years, many families have made state Christmas tree farms their first stop for choosing the perfect tree.

"Searching for and bringing home the perfect tree adds an extra family memory to the holidays," said Dr. Stephen Dicke, area extension forester in Raymond.

"Many people who come to tree farms own artificial trees, but they miss the family experience of finding and cutting their own tree — just like in the 'olden days'."

Mississippi is home to 140 Christmas tree growers spread across 50 counties.

"State-grown trees offer freshness and high quality for bargain prices — they're really one of the best deals around," Dicke said. "Proper care will keep your tree fresh and fragrant throughout the holiday season."

When buying a tree from a retail lot, test it for freshness by looking for soft sap on the cut base. If the needles of the tree bend without breaking, the tree is fresh.

Pine, spruce and fir respond differently to indoor home conditions, so ask the tree farmer or retailer how to best care for your tree.

Dicke encouraged consumers to protect trees from wind when tansporting them. Place the tree in a covered vehicle, trunk or cover it with plastic to minimize stress.

"When you get the tree home, saw off the butt end of the tree one-half to 1 inch above the original cut," Dicke said.

Immediately place the tree in water in a cool place until time to display it."

Cost-conscious consumers may want to select a spot for their tree before purchase.

"It your tree will be displayed against a wall or in a corner, you may be able to hide a defect and purchase a less expensive tree," Dicke said.

"Tree prices also are based on height, so don't waste money buying a big tree that will have to be trimmed to fit your ceiling height."

The Louisiana-Mississippi Christmas Tree Association offered the following tips for the freshest and safest Christmas tree:

- Never let a cut tree run out of water; check it daily.
- Use a sturdy tree stand that holds about a gallon of water.
- Be sure the tree is well-supported and away from fireplaces, radiators, television sets or other sources of heat.
- Never use lighted candles or other open flames on or near Christmas trees.
- Avoid use of combustible decorations and flammable reflectors for colred lights. Keep metal foil "icicles" or tinsel away from bulb sockets.
- Check electric lights and connections. Never use worn, frayed wires or electric cords.
- Unplug electric lights when no one is home.

Correct disposal of the tree after the holidays also is important, so check for local tree recycling programs.

"Sometimes the discarded trees are shredded for landscape mulch, while coastal communities often use them on the coastline for erosion control," Dicke said.

"Discarded trees also can be sunk into fish ponds to provide cover and improve habitat for fish."

Some trees, such as Deodar cedars and Leyland cypress, often are used for landscaping. With proper care, these trees can be planted outdoors after the holidays.

"Leyland cypress is available from some growers in a container or balled and burlapped," Dicke said. "With proper care, these beautiful trees can be planted for landscaping purposes after the holidays."

For information about the choose-and-cut tree farm nearest you, or the location of Mississippi-grown Christmas tree lots, contact your county extension office.

The old-town gallery was opened a year ago to showcase the arts, crafts, history, literature and music of the state.

"Mississippi is such an unknown quantity," says Karlson. "People unfamiliar with our state often have an out-of-date stereotype when they hear the name and never know enough about its cultural richness and diversity.

"In opening the gallery, we ... in search of ... current, culture and traditions around the state."

To that end, Karlson and gallery co-owner Tony Eccles have travelled around Mississippi in search of representative folk art, crafts and curiosities. In addition, the gallery stocks a range of books and publications about the state.

Karlson, a photographer, and Eccles, a multi-media visual artist, also show their own works. Future plans for the gallery include a greater focus on spiritually-oriented arts and fine crafts.

hunting precautions help stop accidents

By Bobbie L. Valentine
MDWFP Communications

"Hunting season" is the ultimate time of year for many Mississippians, but without proper safety precautions, a hunting trip can take a tragic turn.

Richard Cain, director of the hunter education division of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks, said many hunting accidents can be avoided.

"Some of the most common mistakes hunters make include confusing other hunters with game and crossing obstacles with a loaded gun in hand," Cain said.

"Always remember to point the muzzle of a gun in a safe direction and always unload your gun when you finish hunting."

Mississippi is home to 300,000 licensed hunters.

Over the past 11 years, 71 fatal and 238 non-fatal hunting accidents have occurred in Mississippi. All of the fatal hunting accidents from 1993-1994 involved deer hunters who were not wearing the required fluorescent "hunter orange."

"State wildlife regulations require hunters to wear a minimum of 500 square inches of solid, unbroken hunter orange," said Dean Stewart, extension wildlife specialist at Mississippi State University. "This is about the size of the average hunter's chest and back, so a vest is a good choice for safety."

Although research indicates deer can see some shades of blue and green, hunter orange does not pose a detection problem for hunters, Stewart said.

Nationally, the majority of hunting accidents revolve around the use of tree stands while hunting.

Be especially careful while climbing up to reach your tree stand," Stewart said. "Keep the stands in good repair. If the stand is not enclosed, use a safety belt or harness to hold you safely in your stand."

Hunters should remember to gently lay unloaded firearms down with the muzzle pointed away from anyone before crossing fences or other obstacles.

Stewart recommended using the buddy system while hunting.

"Have a buddy to go hunting with, or at least leave word of where you are going with someone," Stewart said.

"If possible, try to get a map of the area you are hunting in, and be sure to take a compass and flashlight with you."

Even though a flashlight is an important part of a hunter's equipment, hunting after dark is illegal in Mississippi. Generally, legal shooting hours for [illegible] half hour before sunrise to one half hour after sunset.

One of a hunter's most important pieces of equipment, a firearm, also is one of the most dangerous.

"Be sure to keep firearms clean, and always treat a firearm as though it's loaded," Stewart said. "Over the past 10 years, there have been 178 shotgun, 77 rifle, 11 muzzle loader and five handgun hunting accidents."

For more information on hunter safety education, call the Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks at 1-800-354-5033. To report hunting violations, contact the department at 1-800-BE-SMART.

Hunting accidents have steadily declined in the state since the beginning of hunter education programs in Mississippi in the 1950s.

The current program requires anyone born after Jan. 1, 1992 to complete a safety course before receiving a hunting license. Anyone wanting more information on hunting safety is encouraged to take the classes.

Values should match actions

TEEN TALK

By Dr. Ann Jarratt
4-H Youth Development Specialist
Cooperative Extension Service

"A lot of my friends are active in church youth programs and call themselves Christians. But they still cheat on tests, fool around with sex and drugs and gossip about others.

"They don't see their inconsistencies. They also seem to think labeling themselves as Christians will shield them from bad consequences. It does seem they get away with more.

"I'm questioning who I am and what I should stand for. Help."

Beliefs and values are hard things to sort out for all of us. We all wish everyone would live their values consistently so we don't have to wonder what they believe.

I personally view Christianity as much more than a "fire insurance" policy. I see it as a way to live a fulfilling life. Christianity watchers often ask two questions — why do bad things happen to Christians and why do Christians do bad things?

The answer to both questions relates to choices and consequences. Good people make bad choices just as bad people do. The consequences for bad choices are usually bad outcomes, regardless of one's religious beliefs.

Don't expect your friends who claim Christianity to be perfect. First of all, they are humans, and they're probably not completely mature, either.

Most importantly, get to know yourself and what you value. Try to live according to your values. Hopefully, your friends will be doing the same thing.

* * * *

"My parents try to make all my decisions and feel they have the right to choose my friends. I don't like the decisions they make for me, and I don't like the people they pick for me. There's not much I do like about what they do.

"I've decided they're never going to like what I do, so I might as well do whatever I please. If I have to slip around to be with the people I like, then that's what I'm going to do. I'm getting good at making up believable stories. What else can I do to survive in their dictatorship?"

A good and happy life can and should be more than mere survival. I find it sad you've given up on your parents and you feel they've given up on you.

Your parents probably haven't given up on you if they're still trying to set boundaries for you and are still providing shelter and financial support. Your relationship with your parents could be improved with a little work.

I suspect real communication between you doesn't exist. Real communication depends on truth of words and feelings expressed on both sides and understood by both sides.

My challenge to you is to put your energies into trying to establish honest communication with your parents rather than practicing your skills of deceit. You have everything to gain if you're successful.

New GI Bill proposed

By Donald Mauffray, CVSO

Like their fathers and grandfathers, future veterans may have the American Legion to thank for a GI Bill that will improve their education and make a better life for them.

Kansas Sen. Robert Dole has introduced into Congress the Servicepersons Readjustment Act of 1995. Like its predecessor, much of the new GI Bill was taken from American Legion recommendations. Senator Dole hopes to push the legislation through the 105th Congress next year.

Under the bill, active-duty GIs would have the option to participate in the program, just like they do now with the Montgomery GI Bill. GIs could contribute $100 a month for 12 to 48 months, depending on the plan they select. Benefits would be payable at a 12 to 1 ratio based on each full year of contributions.

For example, a veteran who contributed $1,200 into the program for a year would be eligible to receive education benefits up to $14,400. A veteran who participated for 48 months would be eligible for benefits totaling $57,600.

Both National Guard and Reservists are eligible to participate, but their contributions and benefits are half those earned by participating active duty personnel.

To be eligible, active-duty personnel must serve at least three years from the date of enrollment. Guard and Reserve members must complete at least six years of continuous duty and have a satisfactory drill attendance rating.

The benefits must be used within 10 years. However, if veterans do not use their benefits within that time, they may request a non-interest-bearing refund in the form of an IRS tax credit.

Veterans with less-than-honorable discharges, and those who attended military academies or received ROTC scholarships, would not be eligible.

Take Off Pounds Sensibly

A new TOPS chapter has been started for those interested in losing weight. Meetings are on Thursdays at Hancock Medical Center with weigh-ins starting at 6 p.m. and the meeting following.

DMR meeting on oyster dredges

Changes in size and weight restrictions for oyster dredges will be discussed at a public hearing Thursday, Dec. 8 at 7 p.m. at the auditorium of the J. L. Scott Marine Education Center in Biloxi.

The proposed changes to Ordinance 1.007 would delete the present weight restriction of 115 pounds and 16 teeth for oyster dredges. The present ordinance has been in effect since Oct. 19.

According to Mike Brainard of the Department of Marine Resources Fisheries Division, the proposed change will make Mississippi's oyster ordinance similar to that of Louisiana and will enable fishermen to harvest more oysters with less effort.

Interested persons are invited to attend the public hearing and submit written or oral comments. Written comments will be received at the Department of Marine Resources office until 5 p.m. Dec. 9.

DMR meeting

Reefs and gill nets discussed

BY JIM MANESS

The Department of Marine Resources Commission meeting was Nov. 21 at the DMR building in Biloxi. Commissioners present were Webb Lee, Henry Boardman, Oliver Sahuque, Douglas Horn and chairman Sherman Muths Jr. Absent were commissioners Dr. Vernon Asper and William Mitchell.

After the approval of the agenda and approval of previous minutes, Muths opened the floor for public comment on any item not already on the agenda.

Public comment was received on the following issues: Oyster fisherman George Stores requested the opening of the tonging reefs in the Bay of St. Louis and Graveline Bayou. He stated since the St. Stanislaus reef was in the immediate area and safe to open, why would the other reef in the Bay not be safe to open?

Joe Gill said he is in the process of studying if the reef should be open and should know within 90 days.

Clyde Brown said a contract is being awarded to clean up the Bangs Lake area. The third biennial Gulf of Mexico Symposium will be March 29-April 1 in Corpus Christi Texas. For information call 1-800-699-GULF.

Commissioner Webb Lee moved there be a public hearing on gill net ban as requested by the municipalities of and the county of Harrison. The date of the gill net hearing will be Dec. 7 at the J. L. Scott Marine Education Center on Hwy. 90 in Biloxi at 7 p.m.

Jimmy Bradly, a commercial fisherman, requested the commission open up the back bays and all estuary areas for gill netting since the fish in those areas are a public resource. The balance of the approximately 25 commercial fishermen at the meeting was requested to hold their comments until the public hearing to be held on Dec. 7.

Commissioner Sahuque requested the dredge size for oyster dredges be changed from the current 16 teeth to 22 teeth. A motion was made to have a public hearing to implement this change.

No action was taken on any changes of the red snapper bag and size limits.

Commissioner Boardman requested the staff look into matching federal regulations with state regulations on charter boats.

Mike Ladner, Wilmer Seymour and Robert Peterson of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors were present to obtain the permit granted for a fishing reef in Hancock County. They additionally requested information on what action has been taken on their application for a share of the Tidelands money. The Tidelands money in question is money received from the casinos from their use of bottom lands.

Commissioner Muths said he would like to put into motion a comprehensive program to make the best use of the Tidelands funds to enhance the Gulf Coast.

Jerry Mitchell, of Coastal Zone Management, said progress is being made on the Clean Vessel Act which will provide sanitary dumping sites for liquid waste from vessels.

Terry Baker of law enforcement stated he is already having a problem with Florida boats coming to Mississippi since gill netting was banned in Florida. He is having a problem with gill netters fishing in closed waters, using improper nets and not marking their nets. He reported several large violations by gill netters which the commission discussed behind closed doors because of legalities.

Imperial Palace Casino was granted a permit to dredge a channel 2,200 feet by 133, build bulkheads and related items, and their wetlands designation was set at S-3 and S-5 as recommended by the staff of DMR.

Casino Magic received the final approval to build an 18-hole golf course on their property. They will compensate for approximately seven and one-half acres of lost wetlands by creating 13 acres of lakes, enhanding 18 acres of pine savanna wetlands, and planting vegetation known for its beneficial environmental effects.

Their project met with the approval of the staff of DMR and was applauded as an example of how a project can enhance the overall environment while still allowing progress.

No action was taken on a Memorandum of Understanding received from the Department of Wildlife Fisheries and Parks requesting they be given one-third of all saltwater license fees.

The next DMR meeting will be Dec. 19.

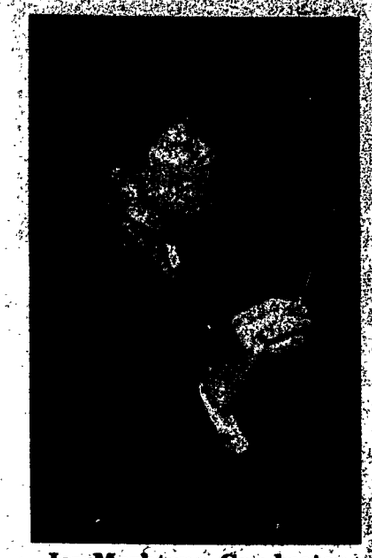
The wedding is proving to be a real "Boomtown family affair" with the wedding party, the guests, the entertainment and the reception all being part of the couple's extended Boomtown family. The bride is even accessorizing her bridal bouquet and garter with keno balls.

"We decided to have our wedding be proof that marriage could be fun right from the start," said Donna. "Hence what better place to unite than the place where our love bloomed: at the Keno Counter at Boomtown."

For those who would like to witness this unique wedding, vows will be exchanged at 8 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 3.

A CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL



Joy Merhtens, Conductor

'Tis the Season for Celebration, and in keeping with the spirit of Christmas, DPAS presents a festive musical variety program as a holiday highlight.

Closing the 1994 season will be an inspiring concert featuring the majestic voices of a choral group, the exciting rhythms of a gospel choir, and the joyous sounds of bells!

This traditional Christmas concert will be performed on Sunday, Dec. 11 at 7 p.m. at the Diamondhead Country Club.

The variety program includes the Bay Area Chorale, the St. Rose Gospel Choir and the Diamondhead Baptist Church Handbell Choir.

The Bay Area Chorale graces the stage once again for what has become a Christmas tradition.

The Chorale was formed in 1993 under the sponsorship of DPAS. Its highly successful debut in Diamondhead was followed by many performances at major functions on the Coast and led to it becoming a professional entity.

It now consists of 45 choral singers representing areas from Pearlington to Ocean Springs.

It is directed by Joy Merhtens with Jim Ballard as their accompanist. Curtis Stout continues his liaison role for DPAS and the Chorale.

The St. Rose Gospel Choir was organized in 1970 and has 40 choral singers ranging in age from 14 to 68.

The choir sings regularly at St. Rose de Lima Catholic Church in Bay St. Louis, but is broadly acclaimed throughout the Coast and is very popular in New Orleans.

The choir has performed at the New Orleans Jazz and Heritage Festival, The House of Blues (the famous New Orleans R & B Club), the Biloxi Blues Festival, the Bay St. Louis Beach Front Festival, and the list goes on.

The group's director is Al Acker.

Adding to the glorious voices of the Chorale and Gospel Choir will be the sounds of the Diamondhead Baptist Church Handbell Choir under the direction of Fred Prince.

Tickets for the performance are $12.50 for adults and $9.50 for students. Tickets may be purchased at Diamondhead Discount Drugs or at the door on the evening of the performance.

Football Forecast

NFL Forecast for Thursday, Sunday and Monday Dec. 1, 4-5

*Minnesota, 24—Chicago, 20
(Thursday) Led by Terry Allen's 159 yards of rushing, the Vikings humiliated the Bears 42-14 at Soldier Field in week three. Chicago's defense has improved, but that'll only make this loss a closer game.

Arizona, 17—Houston, 12
(Sunday) The Oilers beat the Cardinals 38-20 the last time they met, in 1988. Houston actually has the better offense, but that's not saying much; Arizona's defense won't have problems shutting it down.

*Cleveland, 26—N.Y. Giants, 19
Though the Giants are inept on both sides of the ball, this game should be closer than it looks, because neither Cleveland's passing game nor its rushing attack is anything to brag about, either.

Green Bay, 27—Detroit 21
In Milwaukee a month ago, the Packers almost blew a 24-point lead over the Lions but held on to win 38-30. Barry Sanders runs wild against other teams, but once again, G.B. will be ready for him.

Indianapolis, 22—Seattle, 14
The Colts narrowly escaped with a 17-15 win over the Seahawks in week five. This will be another showcase of two top runners — Indy's Marshall Faulk and Seattle's Chris Warren — and not much else.

*Kansas City, 30—Denver, 20
Seven weeks ago, in a Monday-night thriller in Denver, the Chiefs beat the Broncos 31-28. They haven't beaten them twice in 14 years, but K.C. has won three of their last four matchups at home.

*L.A. Rams, 23—New Orleans, 16
These two teams played a strange game six weeks ago in New Orleans, with two kickoffs, a punt and a fumble returned for TD's in the Saints' 37-34 win. Their offenses sure can't score like that.

*Miami, 31—Buffalo, 26
If any team is faced with a crucial game, it's the Bills in this one. They beat the Dolphins with running in October, 21-11, and they desperately need to win again, but it won't happen in Miami.

N.Y. Jets, 28—New England, 25
The Jets played solid offense and kept Patriot QB Drew Bledsoe off balance to take their third straight from the Patriots in October, 24-17. This time around, a N.Y. win will be a minor upset.

*Philadelphia, 29—Dallas, 27
Intercepting Randall Cunningham four times, the Cowboys won a slugfest with the Eagles seven weeks ago, 24-13. In a huge game, we think Philadelphia will end its losing streak to Dallas at five.

Pittsburgh, 34—Cincinnati, 17
The first Steelers-Bengals matchup in October was ugly and mistake-plagued, with Pittsburgh hanging on to win 14-10. Now the Steelers are playing like a real team, while the Bengals, well ...

*San Francisco, 32—Atlanta, 21
On the same weekend as four of the games mentioned above, the 49ers flattened the Falcons 42-3. The rematch will be closer, but Atlanta doesn't have the defense to threaten S.F. in the NFC West.

*Tampa Bay, 27—Washington, 26
Sure, these are bad teams, but this could still be the wildest game of the week. The Redskins have never lost in four games against the Buccaneers, but T.B. will rally for the enthralled home crowd.

*San Diego, 31—L. A. Raiders, 28
(Monday) We hope this game is like the first one, in L.A., in which the Chargers blew a 23-3 lead and then won 26-24 on John Carney's field goal with two seconds left. A potential Monday-night classic?

Local dentist promotes global education

International Education Forum, an international student exchange program headquartered in Bay Shore, N.Y. announced that Kathy Fitzgerald Muir of Bay St. Louis has been named the community coordinator for the Bay-Waveland school district.

Muir will be seeking host families who are interested in particiaping in cultural exchange by hosting a high school student from among 35 counties.

Muir said this area offers international students an excellent opportunity to experience American family life at its finest. In return these international students will enhance our educational programs by sharing another culture, language and knowledge with our teenagers.

"Since most of the students in our high schools have never traveled and many possibly never will, their only exposure to cultures beyond our immediate borders may very well be the world that is brought to them through cultural exchange," Muir said.

Families who host may earn up to 20% scholarship toward an IEF Homestay Aboard to Spain, France, Russia, Australia and many other destinations, making summer travel for our teenagers accessible.

Families interested in bringing cultures together by hosting a student should call Muir at 466-5710.

Jr. Rocks take two from Bearcats

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II

The St. Stanislaus Rock-a-chaw seventh and eighth grade basketball teams swept the Long Beach Bearcats in the two games held at the Brother Peter Memorial Gymnasium on Monday.

The seventh grade Rocks defeated the Bearcats by the score of 32-25. Steven Peterman led the Rock charge with 19 points. Mauricio DeLaGarza played good ball handling the team at the point position. Coach Larry Ramsey commented, "The entire unit is credited with playing the best defense of the season."

The eighth grade team crushed the Bearcats 62-27. The Rocks led a balanced attack that kept the Bearcats off track all night.

Diploma increases future earnings

TEEN TALK

By Dr. Ann Jarratt
4-H Youth Development Specialist
Cooperative Extension Service

"All I ever hear at home is how you have to stay in school if you want to amount to anything. I'm tired of school, and I figure I could do OK on my own. I have my own band, and we do well just doing weekend gigs. If we did it all the time, we could be discovered and make it big. If that happened, who would know or care if we graduated from high school? What do you think?"

I think you're dreaming, and that's part of what needs to happen when you're trying to sort out what you want for your life. Along with dreaming, you also need to look at some realities, probabilities and possibilities.

Even if you and your band were discovered next week, you still need a high school diploma along with the skills and knowledge that go along with it. You need the lessons you learn about people while the stakes are not as high if you misjudge.

No matter how talented you may be, it could take years to be discovered. While you're waiting, you will have to earn money to live. Without a high school diploma, your chances of getting any kind of job are not great. Your chances of getting a good job are slim to none.

In today's newspaper, the Gannett News Service cited Census Bureau data showing the estimated lifetime earnings for people with different educational levels.

People with no high school diploma were estimated to earn $608,810 in their lifetime of working. With a high school diploma, expected earnings rose to $820,870. With some college, earnings were estimated to be $992,890. A bachelor's degree earned $1,420,850. With a professional degree, estimated earnings were $3,012,530.

Those numbers may not mean too much until you translate them into the ability to purchase the kind of lifestyle you want in the future.

I honestly believe dropping out of school will get you slammed doors, headaches and heartaches in the future. Keep playing your music, dreaming your dreams and working toward that diploma. I don't believe you'll ever regret it.

"There's this great looking girl I've been wanting to date all year, but I don't think she'll ever go out with me. I've got a pretty bad name around school. I used to hang out with a rough crowd, but I'm trying to get myself straightened out.

"If I ask her and she turns me down, it'll set me back. What should I do?"

If you ask her out and she accepts, will that solve all your problems? What's really important is for you to accept yourself and like who you are. Whether or not she ever goes out with you doesn't change your value.

If you're worried about your past, think about what this quote means, "No matter what your past has been, your future is perfectly clean."

Your future is like a blank piece of paper, and you can fill it with whatever you like. Work on filling it with good stuff.

FISHIN' Y'ALL

By Jim Maness

It's time to go fishin' y'all.

Before I talk about fishin' I need to make all of the fishin' buddies aware of the hearing on gill nets the Department of Marine Resources is gonna hold Dec. 7 at 7 p.m. at the J. L. Scott Marine complex, located on Point Cadet in Biloxi. The complex is right next to the Isle of Capri Casino on Hwy. 90. If you get on the long bridge over Biloxi Bay heading east you have gone too far.

It is possible parking will be somewhat tight as gill nets are a very controversial issue and it is expected the gill netters will do everything in their power to pack the audience with pro-gill netters. They will turn out every warm body they can find if past experience with gill net hearings are any indication.

The gill net issue has been brought to a head by the recent ban on gill nets in the state of Florida and the tremendous numbers of gill netters operating along the Gulf Coast in pursuit of mullet for their eggs.

The gill netters made themselves so unpopular in Harrison County that the cities of Biloxi, Gulfport, Long Beach and others passed resolutions requesting the Department of Marine Resources totally ban gill nets from Harrison County.

The city of Bay St. Louis experienced an invasion of gill netters in the Bay of such magnitude that the city felt compelled to pass an ordinance banning the use of trammel or gill nets in any city waters.

The ordinance even set up a series of penalities for gill netters that range from $100 for the first offense to $4,000 and 30 days in jail for a third offense. Enforcement of the ban would be the responsibility of the Department of Marine Resources.

The invasion of gill netters in the Bay of St. Louis can properly be called an invasion. One observer reported that one morning there were 18 boats operating gill nets in the area between the railroad bridge and the car bridge in the Bay of St. Louis.

If you consider the average gill net length is 1,500 feet, and the approximate width of the Bay at this place is about 2 miles, there were enough gill nets in operation to create a curtain of webbing that would go from shore to shore almost three times. It is hard to imagine how any living thing could make it through all that webbing without becoming entangled.

To be fair, the gill netters claim their webbing is of a size that is large enough to allow smaller fish to pass through it and not become entangled. They claim they only catch the larger mullet that contain the roe (eggs).

The eggs sell for between $5 and $15 a pound at the dock. I am told they sell in Japan for upwards of $300 a pound. One fisherman reported there are about 15,000 pounds of eggs that have been sold at the Hancock County docks so far. I have no reports of the quantity of mullet eggs sold in Harrison County.

For those folks who don't know what a gill net looks like, they might want to take a look at the net webbing used to wrap Christmas trees. Gill nets have a series of floats on the top of stuff that looks like Christmas tree wrap webbing, and they have some type of weight on the bottom of the webbing to keep the bottom down.

They float in the water like a curtain. As a fish tries to pass through the webbing they become entangles in the webbing by their gills. Hence, the name gill net.

Okay, enough already, where are the fish biting?

Through years of diligent research, sparing no effort, the Turtle has found that the fish generally bite best in the water.

The best spot this past week has been in front of the old Merchant Marine Academy in Henderson Point. The best time has been at night. The reason the best time has been at night is because night time is the time lights are usually turned on and the fish have been biting at night under the lights.

There is a bunch of piling sticking out of the water in this area form the closed-down Paradise Marina. You need to go past these pilings and find the ones with the lights. The lights seem to draw minnows, which speckled trout seem to find especially tasty. This means the trout are lurking in this area waiting for supper.

Live shrimp or live minnows are the best to use for the trouts' supper. I have reports of boats catching 50 to 100 trout per night in this spot.

There are two places to launch in Henderosn Point to fish the lights. One is the Bayview Marina. The Bayview Marina has an electric hoist and offers fuel, ice, soft drinks and barley pop. They do not have live bait. They are open from 6 a.m. to about 7 p.m. It is a good idea to check on closing time when you launch.

The second place to launch is the public ramp. It is located at the end of the road that runs right next to Bayview Marina.

To get to these two launching places you need to take Hwy. 90 to Henderson Point. This is the place between where Hwy. 90 makes a sharp bend away from the beach to where the bridge crosses the Bay of St. Louis. There is a blinking light on Hwy. 90 with a lumber yard on one side of the highway and a boat sales place on the other side of the highway. Turn on the road with the lumber yard. Go straight down that road for about a block and you will come to a stop sign.

If you are on the right road, Annie's Restaurant will be on the corner on your left. Go straight for one more block and you will come to the marina and the public boat launch. Unless your car is amphibious you can't go straight any further. This is the place.

This week's wonderful wise words: Don't miss your chance to express your opinion on the ban of gill nets. Go to the hearing on Dec. 7.

Do baby fish come from eggs, Turtle?

U of Memphis and Hancock County connection take on #1 Tennessee

Hancock County natives Joye Lee-McNelis and Mike Ladner will lead their University of Memphis Lady Tigers against the top ranked Lady Vols of Tennessee.

U of Memphis will be put to the test early this season against Tennessee. Memphis is led by Keeta Matthews and Kitty Allen. Memphis will play its first three games on the road before returning home to play Stephen F. Austin on December 6.

Good luck to the Hancock County connection.

seed catalogs in Mississippi Gardens

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service

The 1995 seed catalogs are beginning to arrive in the mail, and they make interesting reading. Along with magazine articles (and this column, of course), catalogs are among the best sources for learning about what's new, even if you use local seed and plant stores for your garden needs.

Most new varieties available to vegetable gardeners will be those that trickle down from the commercial level. Varieties that do well commercially and hold a piece of the market eventually make an appearance in the home garden trade.

But some new vegetable varieties may not appeal to the commercial vegetable industry because they are too large for market appeal, too tender to withstand shipping pressure or lack the required disease resistance.

Here are some of the new 1995 vegetable varieties along with their developing companies. Ferry-Morse's new Daytona snap bean has dark green, 6-inch long, straight pods. It is supposed to be resistant to fall growing. The Seminis Galaxy broccoli is a heat tolerant, early broccoli for the Southeast. Like all other broccoli varieties, this one probably is best adapted for fall production but also could be a spring production candidate.

Petoseed has the new variety Liberty for the main season and Republic for the medium-early season. Asgrow has Legacy as a full-season hybrid broccoli, which should be considered only for fall production in the South.

There are several new cabbage hybrids that most likely possess the trait of uniform maturity, which can be a problem for gardeners. The new hybrids include Blue Thunder, Bronco, Columbia, Cole, Panther, Red Jewel, Satellite, Sterling and Super Red 83.

New cantaloupe hybrids include Durango and Eclipse. Eclipse, a Petoseed hybrid, is described as large, crackresistant, firm and suited for the Southeast.

The number of new pepper hybrids hitting the market in recent years has been phenomenal. A few for 1995 are Admiral, Aladdin, Bonita, Figaro, Guardian, Mandarin, Pimlico and Sentinel. Admiral from Rogers Seed can be harvested either green or yellow and has excellent disease tolerance.

Figaro from Vilmorin Seed turns from green to red, sets fruit even while the plants are stressed and has good disease tolerance. Mandarin is an elongated pepper that changes from green to a deep orange color. Rogers' Sentinel variety sets fruit under high temperatures and possesses good disease tolerance.

Hasta La Pasta is a new spaghetti squash from Burpee. The compact, bushy plants produce small, deep-orange squash, 7 to 8 inches long. Gardeners should like smaller squash since the standard spaghetti squash seem to make wash tubs full of "spaghetti" when cooked.

One of the new sweet corns is Burpee's Silver Choice, a 75-day white hybrid with ears well-protected by strong, dark-green husks. Summersweet, from Abbot & Cobb, is white and matures about a week later than Silver Choice.

Fabulous is a new tomato from Burpee that has relatively good disease tolerance and produces 8-ounce fruit. Sweet Gold is Sakata's hybrid, yellow cherry tomato with pretty good disease tolerance.

While some seed companies mentioned do not have retail catalogs, they generally sell to companies that do. Look for descriptions and pictures of new varieties in catalogs and ask local seed dealers about the availability of new varieties.

We've all heard about the new Flavr Savr tomato developed through biotechnology, but don't waste your time looking for seeds. Right now the developers are trying to get this tomato into grocery stores.

Though available in only 750 stores in the nation, developers hope to have it in about 1,700 stores by mid-1995. So it will be some time before gardeners see seed of this tomato variety.
